Delphine Doreau

Delphine Doreau was born in Paris in the seventies. She went to art school there, lived in Montmartre, and yes, used to sketch in cafes. She moved in 2004 to California, where the sweet multicultural atmosphere inspired her. She thrived in her own style, sparkling and fresh.

Delphine signs del4yo, literally "Delphine for you", as a kind dedication to all those who appreciate her creations.

Seasons greetings and paper toys with the Non Dairy Diary

Moving to California, I had to find a more multicultural, but still enthusiastic and full of meaning way to celebrate the Holidays.

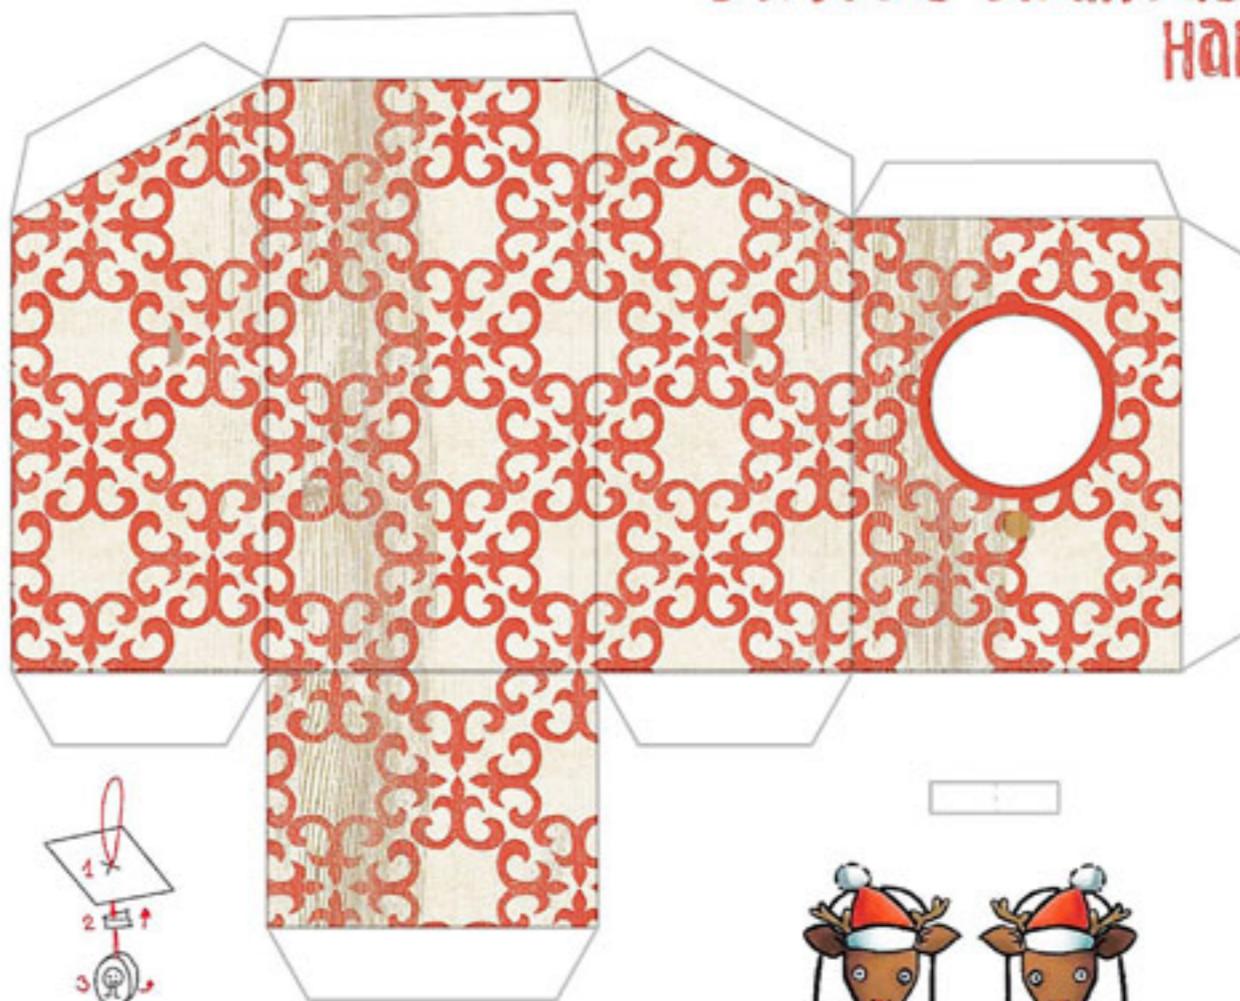

Along with a more international color way, I made a reflection about season celebration. It's all about fun, family, light, home. Every year since 2007 I create a new set of little houses to print and cut out. Thousand of people come to download them on the Non dairy Diary.

Along with the yearly calendar, its a staple of the Non Dairy diary.

2007. The first houses, a cute overload. Featured in Craft Magazine website.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

Cut out all the pieces.

Cut out the X in the roof. Insert a piece of string in the roof.

Make a knot and glue a small folded piece of paper over the knot.

Glue the character an inch under the knot. Fold and glue the house, add the roof. Hang. Gush.

The owls

The black and white version of these little ones, posted on my blog in 2008, became very popular. They were tattooed (eek) and even appeared on a style project on Ohdeedoh, the children part of the famous style blog Apartment Therapy.

Character Concept

Pour ces personnages, j'ai créé le volume 3D, les costumes, les coiffures, et les motifs. Le tout est prêt à envoyer au studio qui fabriquera les modèles. Les designs des personnages, costumes, et coiffures sont juste en face et profil, comme un plan.

Concept art

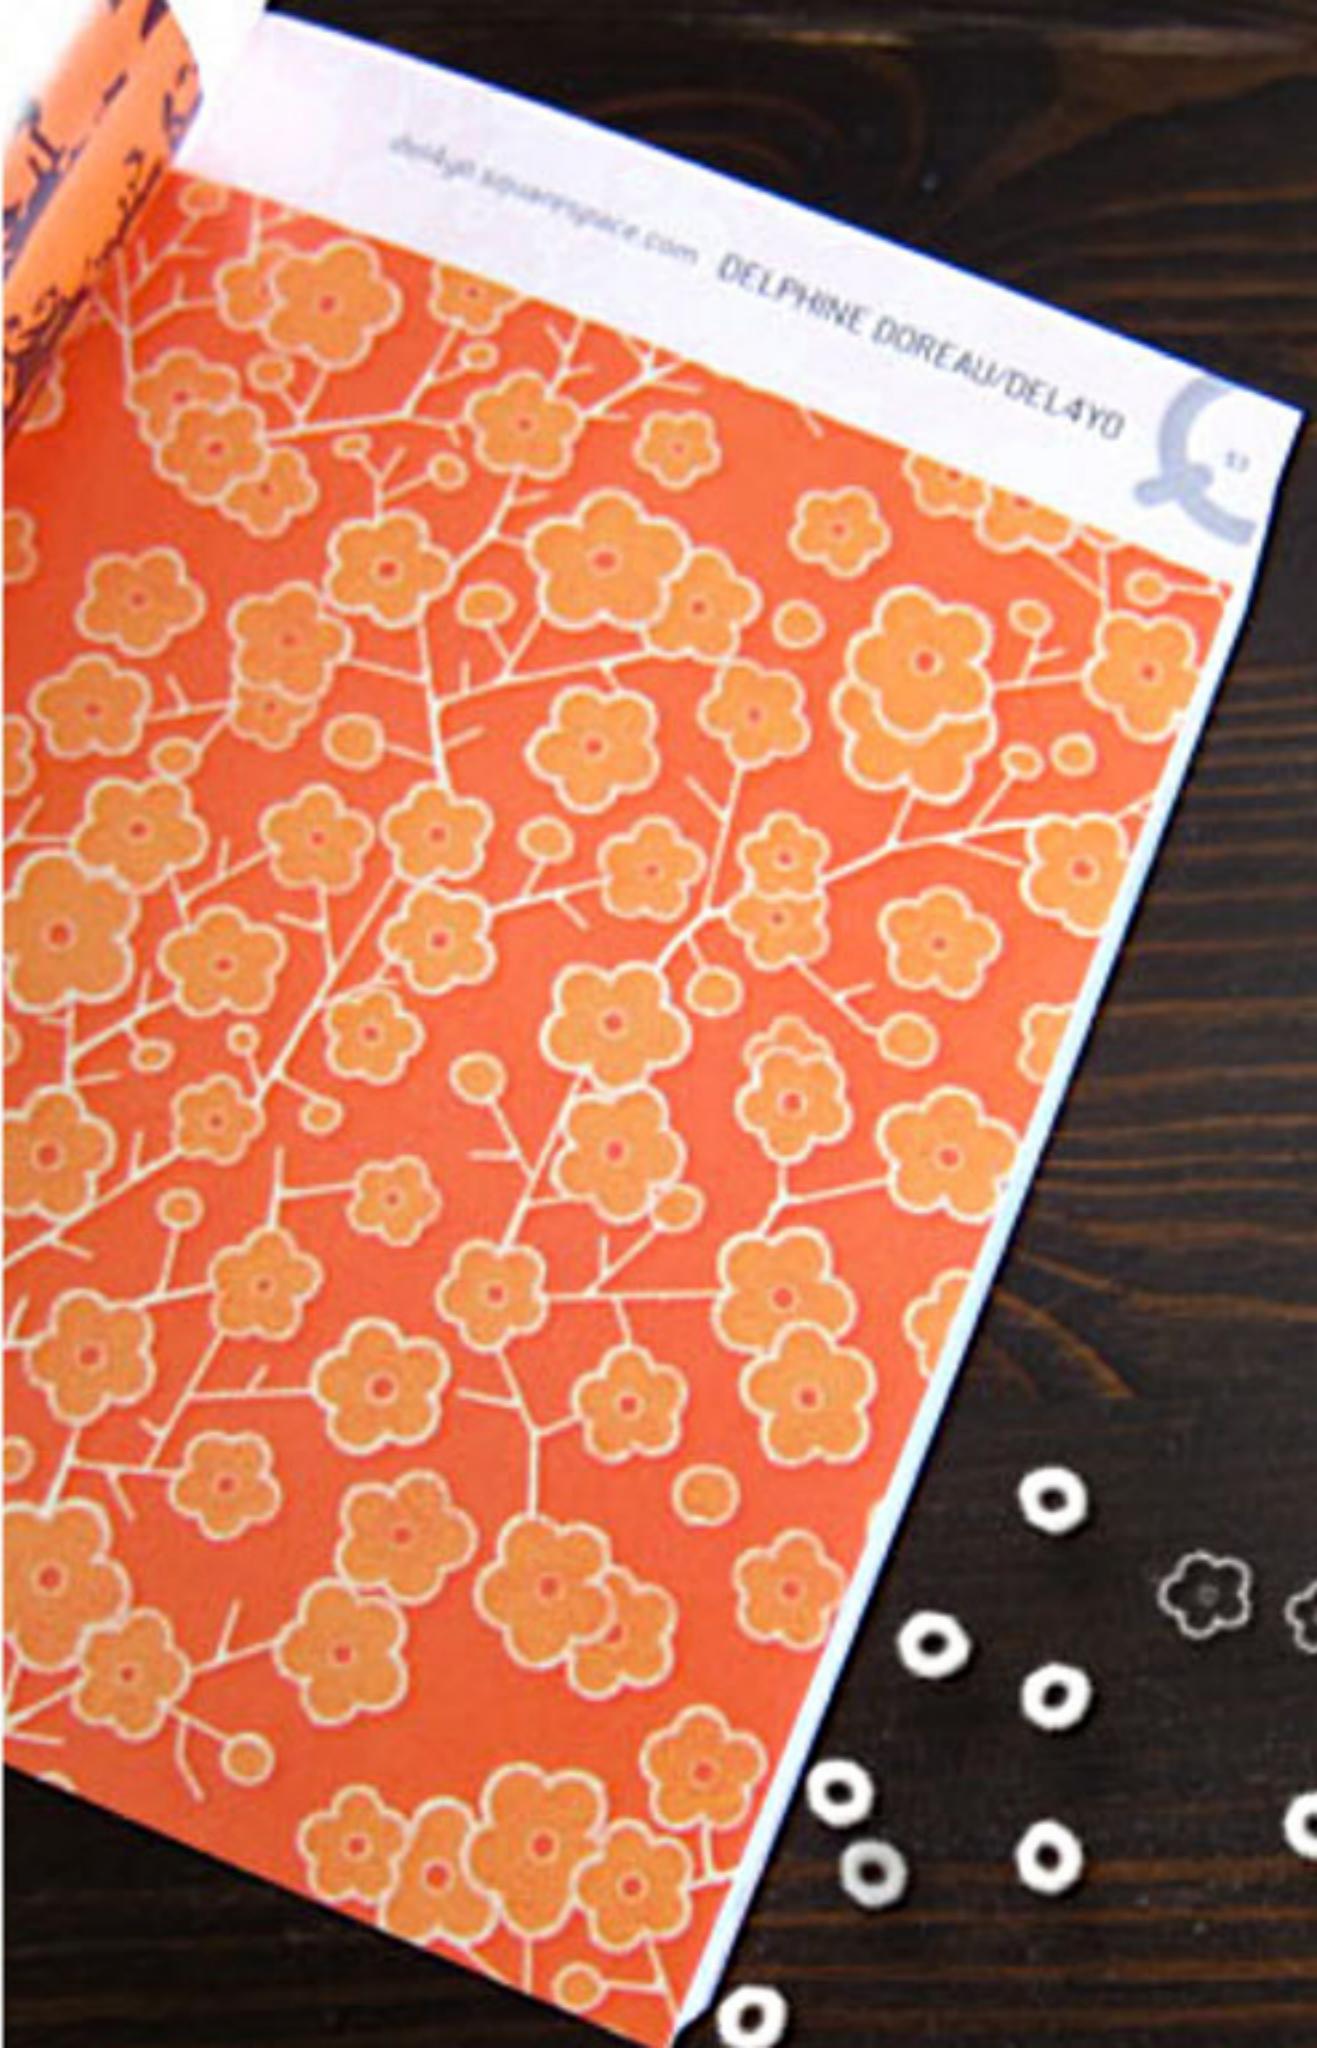

Outside of my work as an illustrator and expert in hyper realistic textures for movies, I also do concept art for games. These images and the following were created to define the gameplay style of the game Little Tycoon, iPad.
